Dear EY Hiring Team,

Re: ET Risk & Compliance – Operations & Reporting Analyst (EY GDS)

My name is Pablo Hidalgo and I would like to apply for the Operations & Reporting Analyst position. When I read the job description, I recognised a lot of what I did for many years: making reports, following controls and coordinating people from different areas.

For almost seven years I was the head of the regional ART unit (workers' compensation insurance) at Federación Patronal Seguros. I had a team and worked every day with Collections, Claims and Prevention. A big part of my job was preparing reports and dashboards in Oracle BI about the portfolio, retention, collections and loss ratios. Management used these reports to make decisions, so I learned that the numbers must be clear and correct. I also applied internal controls in our daily work and kept our client records updated in Microsoft Dynamics 365.

Later I decided to grow on the data side. I studied to be a Data Analyst and now I work with SQL and Power BI (DAX and Power Query). One of my projects is a Power BI dashboard with almost 98,000 IT support tickets. At Outlier I checked the quality of AI model answers, and at Grupo Omint I coordinated two internal tools from the first idea until people could use them. I also use SharePoint, Teams and Planner, and I recently finished the Google Project Management Certificate.

I like this kind of work: putting order in a lot of information and helping a team see what is happening. I am organised, I pay attention to details and I enjoy working with people from different backgrounds. I lived in Australia, Spain and Argentina, so I feel comfortable in international teams.

If you want to see some of my work, my dashboards are on pablohidalgo.site. I would be happy to talk with you.

Thank you for your time.

Kind regards,
Pablo Hidalgo
